"Trends of an individual's adoption of a new system depend on others' usage. In a network, the adoption of a new technology is not only a function of the technology itself, but also of the social network in which it is used. The network structure and the social norms of the network are important factors in the adoption of a new technology. The network structure is the set of relationships between individuals in the network. The social norms are the rules that govern the behavior of individuals in the network. The network structure and the social norms are both important factors in the adoption of a new technology. The network structure is the set of relationships between individuals in the network.
